Club features on Seven Television Tasmania News

Seven Television Tasmania, on its evening news program on Monday 31st October, reported on the success of the Club in being promoted to the A Group in the Interclub Digital Photography competition of the Photographic Society of America.

President Steve was interviewed by Tom Johnson, reporter, and presenter at Channel Seven in the Conservatory in City Park (to get out of the strong wind). Steve talked about the Northern Tasmanian Camera Club, how it had been in existence since 1889, how some of the great Tasmanian photographers were members of the Northern Tasmanian Camera Club.

Steve explained that the Photographic Society of America was the largest organisation for camera clubs in the world. The Northern Tasmanian Camera Club has been and will be competing against the world's best camera clubs. Steve then described the enjoyment he gets from taking and processing photos. Nothing beats being on a deserted beach as the sun emerges over the horizon and bathes the sky with golden colours.

Tom Johnson then interviewed Vice President Rod Oliver who described the benefits of being a member of a camera club, finding out the strengths and weaknesses of his photography. His favourite photo was taken when two outpowered dinghies circumnavigated Australia and he photographed the boats as they approached Hobart. The photo appeared on the front cover of Rotary Down Under, the national Rotary magazine.

Rod also recalled in the recent flooding of the Gorge; he photographed a kayaker paddling down the floodwaters in the Gorge on the 21st October. He snapped the kayaker who made another run in the floodwaters. An unexpected bonus for Rod.

Quotes from President Steve

"I love to be out there in nature's glory"

"For me, it's just getting up early in the morning in the wilderness and being there for the sunrise at Cradle Mountain or somewhere like that."
